II. OUR POLICIES, PROCESSES, AND INTERNAL ACCOUNTABILITY RELEVANT TO MODERN SLAVERY

We have a zero-tolerance approach to modern slavery and human trafficking, and we are committed to acting ethically and with integrity in all our business dealings and relationships, and to implementing and enforcing effective systems and controls to ensure modern slavery and human trafficking are not taking place in any part of our business or supply chain. To this end, we are committed to ensuring there is transparency in our own business and in our approach to tackling modern slavery throughout our supply chains. Our Code of Business Conduct (available at https://www.weatherford.com/en/documents/corporate-documents/weatherford-code-of-conduct/weatherford-code-of-conduct-english.pdf) honors these values and our global corporate responsibility relating to modern slavery. risks and violations. Weatherford requires its suppliers to take due diligence measures to identify modern slavery related supplier during the onboarding process, and added initial Compliance Questionnaire, which we provide to each bargain. We have also revised our Supplier Business lawful freedom of association and right to collectively commitment to universal human rights, including specific non-compliance events, including those relating to modern slavery will face disciplinary action, which could result in disciplinary action for misconduct or gross misconduct, or termination, as applicable.

In addition to our Code, Human Rights Standard, and Supplier Code, another core element of our commitment to human rights and combating modern slavery includes our fostering of an enterprise culture that requires disclosure of non-compliance events, including those relating to modern slavery and fair labor requirements, and protects those who report suspected non-compliance or other abuse of the same. Our existing grievance mechanisms provide a means to track reports of modern slavery breaches and our internal accountability standards ensure that any employee or supplier who breaches the prohibition against modern slavery will face disciplinary action, which could result in dismissal for misconduct or gross misconduct, or termination, as applicable.

Enterprises. Specifically, it requires respect for human rights always, and that all people be treated with dignity and respect, and without discrimination, harassment or retaliation, without exception. Weatherford is committed to respecting, protecting, and fulfilling human rights and fundamental freedoms of those working within or affected by our business. We prohibit all forms of forced, compulsory, child, or other prohibited labor internally and in our supply chain. All work must be completed voluntarily meaning the employee is free to quit, strike, or otherwise cease work in a safe manner compliant with applicable law. The standard also calls for compliance with local working hours, wage and safety laws, as well as to protecting data privacy, and allowing freedom of association and collective bargaining.
Finally, among its remaining provisions, it also requires we identify and monitor potential human rights impacts of our industry, and promote a “speak up” culture valuing transparency. All of these efforts are intended to contribute to combating modern slavery.

Our Supplier Code of Conduct (available at https://www.weatherford.com/en/documents/corporate-documents/supplier-code-of-conduct/supplier-code-of-conduct-english.pdf) (“Supplier Code”) acknowledges that the strength of Weatherford’s reputation is based not only on our own conduct, but also on the behavior of those with whom we do business. The Supplier Code includes our commitment to universal human rights, including specific prohibitions against the use of forced or compulsory labor, particularly anyone held in slavery or servitude, whether adults or children, as well as a commitment to employees’

lawful freedom of association and right to collectively
bargain. We have also revised our Supplier Business
supplier during the onboarding process, and added initial due diligence measures to identify modern slavery related risks and violations. Weatherford requires its suppliers to comply with our Supplier Code, which makes clear that Weatherford will work only with those suppliers, contractors, and business partner that share our values and commitment to ethical business practices that comply with all applicable laws.

In addition to our Code, Human Rights Standard, and
fostering of an enterprise culture that requires disclosure of
non-compliance events, including those relating to modern slavery and fair labor requirements, and protects those who report suspected non-compliance or other abuse of the
to track reports of modern slavery breaches and our internal accountability standards ensure that any employee or
supplier who breaches the prohibition against modern
slavery will face disciplinary action, which could result in

dismissal for misconduct or gross misconduct, or
termination, as applicable.

Specifically, in addition to promoting open and honest communication lines with management, Compliance, our Ombuds office, our Employee Relations representatives, and other key functions, our confidential reporting tool, Listen Up (available at www.listenupwft.com), is a resource for employees, customers, suppliers, and all other stakeholders to report conduct that is or may be illegal, unethical, or otherwise violate our Code of Business Conduct or other policies or procedures. Concerns may be reported to the hotline via telephone or internet in over 100 languages, 24 hours a day, 7 days a week, and may be reported anonymously if desired. Our hotline includes human rights related sub-categories, including “child/forced labor” and “slavery/human trafficking.” We promote our hotline through promotional materials at all Weatherford facilities and through Compliance and management communications throughout the enterprise. Our commitment to organizational justice brings total transparency to our technology and compliance efforts, including our grievance mechanisms and our handling of matters raised through the same, to further ensure our employees are confident that matters raised will be taken seriously and addressed as appropriate.

We have a dedicated team of investigators, supplemented by a team of our HR and QHSE professionals who have been trained on investigations, who devote significant resources to investigating grievances and imposing remedial action where necessary to hold violators of Company policies or the law accountable. Our Compliance function monitors and continuously reports matters including any that would relate to modern slavery to our management team and Board of Directors. Remediation efforts regarding substantiated concerns also are reported to management and the Board of Directors to ensure adequate oversight over our handling of accountability for those who, if identified, have perpetrated modern slavery inside the organization or in our supply chain, as well as compensation and justice for victims of modern slavery in such instances.

We know that accessibility and thorough investigative procedures are not the only stepping stones to promoting a “speak up” culture necessary to further our commitment to combating modern slavery. We believe that everyone at every level of our Company inclusive of our external stakeholders should be able to raise compliance concerns without any fear. To this end, we do not tolerate retaliation against anyone for raising a concern in good faith. We require directors, officers, managers, supervisors, and any other Weatherford leaders and all employees to uphold our commitment, by never retaliating themselves or allowing others to retaliate. Manager-specific training was launched in 2016 and repeated to a greater population of managers in 2018 to enhance skills regarding how to effectively listen to and receive employee concerns and complaints so as to ensure no retaliation in response to the same.
III. OUR DUE DILIGENCE AND SUPPLY CHAIN MANAGEMENT

Our enterprise Global Procurement Policy requires that all suppliers providing goods and/or services to Weatherford are reviewed, approved and managed per Weatherford standards. These include having acknowledged and completed the Supplier Code of Conduct described above, prohibiting the use of forced and compulsory labor, or anyone held in slavery or servitude, and requiring a commitment to comply with all applicable laws and the principle of universal human rights. Completion of our supplier onboarding process also is required. The process includes running the supplier through our enterprise screening tool to confirm the supplier is not a restricted party based on international trade regulatory lists issued by government regulatory agencies worldwide or on Weatherford’s past experience with the supplier suggesting compliance concerns, which could include modern slavery risks. As was described above, beginning this year, our onboarding documents for suppliers also aim to identify modern slavery related risks in supply chain. Additionally, we have amended our purchase order terms and conditions to include specific reference to anti-slavery laws requiring prevention of modern slavery in their organizations and in their supply chain.

Several years ago, Weatherford began a supplier rationalization project, with the goal of consolidating spend with larger suppliers and reducing our overall supplier footprint. A reduction in suppliers and a focus on larger suppliers reduces modern slavery risk by increasing control checks and transparency into our supply chain. In 2018, we reduced our population from approximately 33,000 to 19,000 active global suppliers. We plan to reduce the number of supplier to approximately 10,000 in 2019.

IV. OUR MODERN SLAVERY RISK ASSESSMENT AND VERIFICATION

Weatherford views as a journey the global mission to combat modern slavery through heightened corporate focus. We continue to study the risks in this space to verify our modern slavery risk profile.

We have consulted numerous indices to obtain understanding of the countries, regions and industries in which modern slavery risks may be higher and why, thereby enhancing our risk analysis abilities. We believe there is a direct correlation between geographies subject to enhanced corruption risk and slavery risk due to lacking transparency and effective rule of law. As an oilfield services provider, we have a presence across many high-corruption risk geographies. We continue our assessment of modern slavery risks in our supply chain based on the Global Slavery Index resources available at https://www.globalslaveryindex.org/.

We are blessed to manage a highly skilled workforce in our core oilfield services thereby provoking less direct modern slavery risk. However, we must be vigilant about our indirect risks provoked by ancillary services and manufacturing activities that support our business. We consider at-risk groups relevant to our industry to include: contracted cleaning; catering and landscaping services; static security guards; outsourced manufacturing and similar forms of outsourced labor; hospitality services including hotels and restaurants used by our staff; and construction and related services associated with the building and maintenance of our facilities. These and other similar risks could be exacerbated with business partnerships such as joint ventures where we do not exert majority control.

Having established the risk in the above-mentioned areas of our business, in 2018 we worked on developing additional controls for active and new suppliers outsourcing the labor force to our company. In 2019, we plan to begin an auditing and certification process on a risk basis for manpower companies in our supply chain. We continue our assessment of other groups of suppliers from the perspective of modern slavery risks.

V. OUR TRAINING AND CAPACITY-BUILDING APPROACH

Employees are required to acknowledge the Code of Business Conduct and the Human Rights Standard and to participate in Code of Business Conduct training. As noted above, our Code of Business Conduct addresses Weatherford’s commitment to human rights and compliance with laws.

In 2018, we identified and developed, in coordination with a well-respected third-party training provider, an online training module intended to raise awareness of modern slavery risks. We expect this will enhance our employee base’s ability to detect and raise concerns relating to modern slavery. Training will be obligatory for the segments of our employee population we consider most key to identifying, deterring, and protecting against modern slavery in our company and our supply chain.
VI. OUR ADDITIONAL ACTIONS TO INCREASE EFFECTIVENESS AND OUR KPI CONSIDERATIONS

We recognize that the prevention, detection, and reporting of modern slavery in any part of our business or supply chains is the responsibility of all those working for us or under our control. In 2018, we took the following actions to supplement our current framework consisting of the policies, processes, due diligence, supply chain management, and training described above.

- Enhanced workforce controls: We surveyed our processes globally to ensure that in all our locations we require proof of age for Weatherford employment candidates and confirmation that employees have access to proof of payment of wages in full.

- Collaborative efforts: We continued to enhance our understanding of modern slavery risks and best practices aimed at minimizing these risks through participation in industry and other corporate conferences, benchmarking sessions, and more informal stakeholder interactions, roundtables and briefings, including devoted to modern slavery and human trafficking risks specifically in oil and gas industry. This included hosting a special event for our employees with a presentation by Minal Patel Davis, the Special Advisor to the Mayor of the City of Houston on Human Trafficking. Her presentation focused on identifying risk factors and fight against human trafficking in our personal lives and throughout the Weatherford supply chain. We understand the importance of our participation in tackling modern slavery risks in the communities where we operate and will continue our efforts to build necessary partnerships with other companies and organization combating modern slavery and human trafficking.

- Internal emphasis: Each year, Weatherford sends all employees a message to commemorate the United Nations' International Anti-Corruption Day and International Human Rights Day. For the first time, in 2018, our message consisted of a video focused significantly on human trafficking and our obligation as employees and world citizens to heighten our awareness of such risks.

In 2019, as earlier described, we plan to further reduce our supplier population, develop an audit and certification process for our manpower agencies, and continue to partner with organizations combatting modern slavery in ways that increase awareness in organization. We are committed to further study of our enterprise practices to identify opportunities to combat modern slavery and human trafficking. As a result, we continue to evaluate what would be most effective key performance indicators to monitor and address our modern slavery risk beyond 2019.

Our Board of Directors has overall responsibility for ensuring that our framework for addressing modern slavery risks complies with our legal and ethical obligations, and that all those under our control comply with it. Management at all levels are responsible for ensuring those reporting to them understand and comply with the policies and procedures relating to this framework and are given adequate and regular training on it and the issue of modern slavery in supply chains.

This statement applies to Weatherford International plc and its UK subsidiaries, including the main operating entity Weatherford U.K. Limited, and is made pursuant to section 54(1) of the Modern Slavery Act 2015, pursuant to the California Transparency in Supply Chains Act of the United States, and pursuant to our enterprise sustainability objectives and constitutes Weatherford’s slavery and human trafficking statement for the financial year ending 2018.
