The conference will showcase critical topics and the challenges Weatherford solves for the global energy industry by harnessing the power and potential of advanced digitalization through integrated workflows that take automation one step closer to complete autonomous control. Keynotes and breakout sessions include integrating multiple manual operations into one automated workflow, maximizing well data to accelerate well delivery and reduce carbon footprint, and more. Discussions will also center the Company's focus on combining competencies and next-generation digital paradigms, such as Industry 4.0, to increase operational efficiency, improve safety, and reduce carbon emissions.

Manoj Nimbalkar, Vice President of Digital Solutions, said, "Weatherford is a key player in bringing digital innovation to the energy industry, in collaboration with our clients and key technology partners. We are excited to showcase our progress in the next-generation digital technologies on our software and automation platforms. Our customers and our teams look forward to collaborating in person at the FWRD conference."
